Information Automatically Collected through the Use of Our Site

Analytics, Cookies, and Pixels

Our Site utilizes various tracking technologies such as analytics tools, cookies, and pixels to enhance your experience, analyze site performance, and improve the effectiveness of our services. The information gathered with these technologies includes data that in some jurisdictions could be considered personally identifiable information and sensitive personally identifiable information as well as anonymized, non-personally identifiable information. These technologies work together to collect, process, and sometimes share information about your online activities. Below is a detailed explanation of each and how they function in compliance with laws such as the California Consumer Privacy Act (CCPA), Virginia Consumer Data Protection Act (VCDPA), and Colorado Privacy Act (CPA) & other U.S. States that may have applicable Data Privacy Laws.

All such information is collected in real time as one accesses and navigates all areas of our website and is transmitted in real time to our third-party aggregators, advertisers, and analytics providers.

Analytics

What are Analytics?

Analytics tools, such as Google Analytics, are software that collects and processes data about how visitors interact with our Site. These tools track metrics like page views, bounce rates, time spent on pages, and other interactions to help us understand and improve the Site's performance.

How Analytics Work

Analytics software uses tracking codes embedded within our Site to gather information about your browsing behavior, including the pages you visit, the time and date of your visit, your IP address, browser type, and device identifiers. Analytics tools may process this data in combination with other information, such as unique IDs stored in cookies, to deliver more detailed insights.

Information Collected

- Site usage statistics (pages visited, time on site)
- IP address and geolocation data
- Browser type and device information
- Referring to website or source of visit

How Analytics May Share Data

The data collected by analytics tools may be shared with third-party service providers or advertising partners. Under some privacy laws, this sharing could be considered a "sale" of your personal information, especially when combined with data collected through cookies or pixels. However, Beghou does not sell or share your personal information in exchange for monetary compensation.

Beghou uses HubSpot's built-in web traffic analytics tool to track, measure, and report on how visitors find and interact with our website. More information about HubSpot's privacy practices may be found on their website's Privacy Policy: <https://legal.hubspot.com/privacy-policy>

Google Analytics is a web analytics service offered by Google that tracks and reports website traffic.

Google Tag Manager deploys and manages marketing and analytics tags to support tracking and analysis of site traffic.

Google uses non-personally identifiable, anonymized data collected by us to track and monitor the use of our Site. This non-personally identifiable, anonymized data is shared with other Google services.

For more information on the privacy practices of Google, please visit the Google Privacy Terms web page: <https://policies.google.com/privacy>

Site Analytics Session Replay

Our Site uses website session replay analytics software that automatically collects information on how you interact with our site to help us improve our Site by fixing broken links or providing better access to the information you are seeking. Our analytics software collects information such as what pages you visit, links clicked, referring URL, browser and operating system of your device, cookie information, mouse movements as well as text that you enter into forms on our Site - even if you subsequently delete the information typed into a form and do not submit such information. Such information enables us to replay how you interacted with our Site. For the avoidance of doubt, this software does not track anything on your computer – it only tracks signals that your computer sends to our Site when you interact with it. We use various vendors to collect this analytics data, and your information is disclosed to them for the purpose of providing their analytics services to us. Your information is not transmitted to such vendors for any other purpose.

Cookies

What are Cookies?

Cookies are small pieces of data (text files) that a website stores on a your device through your web browser when you visit the website. Cookies are used to remember information about the you, such as your preferences and login information, and to enable core website functionality. Cookies may also be used to track and analyze your browsing behavior.

- First-Party Cookies. First Party Cookies are cookies set up directly by Beghou. First-Party Cookies are typically used to support core site functionality, such as remembering preferences, login information or previous interactions with the Site.
- Third-Party Cookies. Third-Party Cookies are set by a domain different than the domain of the website you are visiting. Beghou may use Third-Party Cookies to support our advertising, marketing, and analytics efforts.

How Cookies Work

Cookies can be either session-based (lasting only while your browser is open) or persistent (remaining on your device after you close your browser). They store data such as login credentials, user preferences, and tracking identifiers, which can be accessed by our Site or third-parties to enhance your experience or deliver targeted advertising.

Information Collected

- Unique user identifiers
- Login information and user preferences
- Browsing history on our Site

- Interaction with advertisements

How Cookies May Share Data

Cookies work in conjunction with analytics tools and pixels to store and transfer personal information like user IDs and browsing behavior. This information can be shared with third-party partners to deliver personalized ads or analyze user behavior. As defined by certain privacy laws, this data sharing may qualify as a "sale" of your personal information. However, Beghou does not sell or share your personal information in exchange for monetary compensation.

How to Control the Use and Sharing of Cookies

When you visit our Site for the first time, or any time after you clear all of your cookies, depending on your geographic location, you may have the ability to adjust what categories of cookies our Site will enable and share when you navigate our Site.

What are Pixels?

Pixels, also known as tracking pixels or web beacons, are tiny, invisible images embedded within web pages or emails that track your actions and behavior. Pixels provide valuable insights into the effectiveness of marketing campaigns and track conversions.

How Pixels Work

Pixels activate when you load a web page or open an email, sending information about your activity (such as pages visited, time spent on the web page, or interactions with content) back to the server. Pixels often work in conjunction with cookies to transfer more detailed information, such as unique user identifiers, to analytics platforms or advertising networks.

Information Collected

- IP address and geolocation data
- User activity on our site (e.g., clicks, scrolls)
- Time and date of website visit
- Information from cookies (e.g., unique user IDs)

Pixels often share information with third-party service providers to measure the effectiveness of advertising campaigns or improve the targeting of ads. This sharing may involve personal identifiers stored in cookies or analytics tools, which could be considered a "sale" of personal information under applicable data privacy laws. However, Beghou does not sell or share your personal information in exchange for monetary compensation.

Depending on the service provider or third-party that hosts the pixel, you may already have an established account and relationship with that third-party provider, such as Facebook. Because of that, your unique user ID with that third-party provider may be shared with that provider along with the pixel data from our Site.

Pixels also assist us in assessing the accuracy and performance of our advertising and marketing campaigns.

Data Sharing through Analytics, Cookies, and Pixels

We may share the information collected through analytics, cookies, and pixels with third-party service providers, related parties (such as partners and affiliates), and advertisers or analytics platforms, for purposes such as improving the performance of our website or delivering targeted ads. Some privacy laws, like the CCPA, consider the transfer of personal information for these purposes as a "sale." However, Beghou does not sell or share your personal information in exchange for monetary compensation.

You have the ability to control the types of information collected through these technologies by:

- Managing or withdrawing your cookie preferences at any time by clicking 'Cookie settings' in the footer of our website.

How We Use Your Personal Data

Beghou takes your privacy very seriously and will never sell your Personal Data to anyone in exchange for monetary compensation. However, we do share your Personal Data via automated technologies and certain U.S. and foreign data protection laws may deem this to be a form of "sale" or "sharing" of personal data.
